

CAMC and HospiceCare present a Mini-Medical School for the Public

Being Mortal: Medicine and What Matters in the End

Made possible by a grant from the Harman Foundation in partnership with the Hospice Foundation of America and the CAMC Foundation.

Thursday, October 20, 2016
5:30 – 8:30 p.m.

CAMC Memorial Hospital
WVU Building
1st Floor Auditorium
3110 MacCorkle Ave. SE
Charleston, WV 25304

About the program

Being Mortal delves into the hopes of patients and families facing terminal illness. The film investigates the practice of caring for the dying and explores the relationships between patients and their doctors. It follows a surgeon, Dr. Atul Gawande, as he shares stories from the people and families he encounters professionally and from his own experience with his dying father.

The film sheds light on how a medical system focused on cure often leaves out the sensitive conversations that need to happen so a patient's true wishes can be known and honored in the end. Following the film, a panel of experts will discuss the concepts presented and respond to questions from participants.

Learning objectives:

This program will highlight the importance of communication between physicians, patients and families at end of life to ensure that individual preferences and values are honored.

After this program, participants will be able to:

- Describe key ways that improving communication about individual goals, values, and preferences can improve the quality of care received by patients with advanced illness.
- Identify common barriers to effective conversations about end-of-life goals during serious illness and approaches for overcoming them.
- Describe the basic components of conversations that facilitate alignment of patient goals with the care they receive at the end of life.
- Identify at least two resources for advance care planning.
